Table of Contents

- The Thesis Proposal should include a Table of Contents that outlines the sections of the proposal.
- The Table of Contents should include page numbers.

Thesis Statement/ Research Problem

- The purpose of a Thesis Statement/ Research Problem is to summarize your thoughts and provide the reader a clear and important purpose for the upcoming research.
 - Example: “Designing a seniors home in a rural setting” vs. “Creating an environment in which seniors who are used to an independent rural lifestyle can thrive in an shared-living setting.”
- After reading the Thesis Statement/ Research Problem the reader should:
 - Understand the authors viewpoint on the topic, and
 - Understand how the upcoming research is going to support this statement.

Examples can be found in the Thesis Proposal Outline.

For further guidance on how to write a thesis statement please see the list of writing references on the RAIC Syllabus webpage, Report Writing References.

Thesis Introduction

- The purpose of the Thesis Introduction is to provide a brief background on the thesis research. It must:
 - introduce the reader to the topic,
 - And provide an outline of the key ideas guiding the research.
- The introduction may include the thesis statement/ research problem again.
- The Thesis Introduction may be repurposed in your thesis later.
- Approximately one page of text

For further guidance on how to write an introduction please see the list of writing references on the RAIC Syllabus webpage, Report Writing References.

Project Statement

- The Project Statement provides an outline of the thesis project to be undertaken and the case studies that are informing the work.
- The Project Statement should include:
 - a short summary of the case studies.
 - the reason the case studies are applicable,
 - If possible or appropriate, include a proposed project site(s) and reason for this selection.

Methodology

- The purpose of the Methodology section is to provide the reader with a framework for how the research will be undertaken. The author should indicate the process used for data collection and the research methodology to be used.
- Reference should be made to any specific research methodology theories or resources that will be followed.
- The Methodology section can also include an outline of how the project will be developed.

Resources

- The Thesis Proposal should include a section of the available resources to be referenced during the research. If possible, the list of resources should be broken up into primary and secondary sources.
- Sources could include but is not limited to interviews, questionnaires or surveys, journals or magazines, newspapers, photographs, professional resources or reports, organization or firm research or whitepapers.

Literature Review

- The Literature Review should be a comprehensive summary of what has been published on the topic. This section should give the reader a general understanding of the research that has already been published on the author's topic and some of the key influencers.
- In the case of the Illustrated Textual Thesis the student must present an EXHAUSTIVE literature review.

Bibliography

- The Thesis Proposal needs to include a bibliography of all resources referenced.

For further guidance on how to write an introduction please see the list of writing references on the RAIC Syllabus webpage, Report Writing References.

Advisors' Documentation

- The Advisors' Documentation section of the Thesis Proposal provides the reader with a summary of each of the advisors' backgrounds and why they were selected for the role of advisor on this thesis.
- The Advisors should provide letters of agreement for serving on the Thesis Review Panel.
